*Check whether Num Lock, Caps Lock or Scroll Lock are activated or not. *Highly recommended for someone who wants to check whether the physical function keys on his/her keyboard are functional or not. *Simple to use, no documentation is included. *Free to try. Q What is Justkeylock? A Justkeylock is a lightweight application that displays basic information about your keyboard, thus providing you with useful details in case you have a malfunctioning device. The application displays a tick next to each function key, showing you whether or not it is enabled or not. Q How does Justkeylock work? A When you launch the application, it displays a checkbox for each function key that is present on your keyboard. Each function key is named and displays a tick next to it whenever the associated lock is activated. Q How is Justkeylock different from any other similar application? A Justkeylock is not an alternative to any other similar application. Instead, it is a separate, standalone application that allows you to perform basic keyboard-related functions. Q How do I check my keyboard's function keys? A You can turn to Justkeylock if your keyboard has malfunctioned and you need a quick, efficient way to check whether the Num Lock, Caps Lock or Scroll Lock buttons are activated or not. This tool displays the names of the keys mentioned above, as well as a checkbox next to each item. The checkbox displays a tick whenever its corresponding lock key is activated. Q Can I use Justkeylock if I have multiple keyboard models? A Justkeylock features a user-friendly, minimalistic interface that encompasses straightforward functions, but no form of documentation is included. Justkeylock, nevertheless, does display information about your keyboard, so you can check whether its Num Lock, Caps Lock or Scroll Lock function keys are functional or not. Q How do I use the Refresh button? A You can click the Refresh button to refresh the display on your keyboard's Num Lock, Caps Lock or Scroll Lock status. Q How do I turn off the Auto-Refresh function? A You can do so by toggling the Auto-Refresh function on and off. Q How do I use the "Keyboard

Microsoft Office Access is an application that is used to create and maintain data-based applications. These databases are used in a wide range of business settings, from small businesses to large-scale government organizations. Access is a very robust piece of software, but with the increased usage of computers in business settings, databases get more prone to errors. Such errors need to be detected and fixed as soon as possible. With Access, these errors can be detected in a manner that is relatively easy, and for the most part, needs no special skills to implement. This is because, as stated earlier, Access is a robust piece of software, and can be configured to detect certain errors automatically. In order to use this feature, you should make sure that Access is installed on your computer. How to use this tool: This utility allows you to test the accessibility of the database you are using. For this, you should navigate to the Access database that you want to test. If you are not sure of the folder that contains your database, you can navigate to its location by clicking the Browse button. Alternatively, you can manually enter the full path of your database file in the appropriate field. After you have chosen your database, click the Open button. After you have clicked the latter button, the application will display you the file name of your database. You can then test it by clicking the Accessibility Check button. You can get the full version of this tool from the Microsoft site. Handy Tips - Is your computer slow? Handy Tips- Are your computer slow?
