The incidence of endocrine disorders was studied in 142 patients with Crohn's disease. Fifty patients had an active disease (groups A and B) and 82 had a quiescent disease (group C). In groups A and B, 12 endocrine abnormalities were found in 10 patients (7.1 per cent): 4 cases of hyperthyroidism, 2 cases of hypothyroidism, 2 cases of hyperprolactinemia and 4 cases of central diabetes insipidus. In group C, 3 endocrine abnormalities were found in 2 patients (2.4 per cent): 1 case of central diabetes insipidus and 1 case of hyperprolactinemia. In groups A and B, significant clinical differences were observed in the appearance of endocrine abnormalities. Patients with inflammatory bowel disease show more frequently an endocrine disorder.
