Hawaii's House of Representatives passed a bill Tuesday that would prohibit state and local agencies from providing benefit plans that cover abortion. The bill, House Bill 69, now heads to the state Senate. No Governor has yet taken a stand. Under the proposal, no public or private company would be permitted to restrict the coverage of abortion in a plan provided to an employee. Any existing benefits would continue, but no new policies would be offered. The prohibition would only apply to plans covering employees of state and local agencies, hospitals, and other organizations. The ban does not apply to plans offered by the state and federal governments. The Guttmacher Institute, which supports abortion rights, opposes the ban. "The bill, which is intended to ban insurance coverage of abortion, fails to recognize the protections currently in place that protect employees who choose to have abortions," Guttmacher's senior policy analyst Laura Linden told MarketWatch. The Hawaii bill is the latest in a series of bans on abortion access that have been passed in Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, Ohio, and Arkansas. The bans are in addition to laws passed earlier this year that would threaten to make abortion illegal in most of the U.S. At least 16 states passed laws banning abortion
