Israel has been hit by a wave of deadly shootings and attacks from Palestinian militants that has claimed 25 lives, including an air strike on a bus in Jerusalem. Israeli police spokesman Micky Rosenfeld said at least 25 people had been killed since the end of a three-week truce on Friday, and some 1,200 wounded. The latest violence began on Saturday when a Jerusalem resident was fatally shot by Israeli forces after a knife attack on Friday night, and a Palestinian man was fatally shot by Israeli forces on Thursday after stabbing an Israeli security guard. Rosenfeld said Israeli security forces carried out 32 arrests in Jerusalem during the latest bout of violence, though he did not specify when the incidents occurred. The Palestinian Islamic Jihad group claimed responsibility for the bus attack that killed one person and wounded another. Violence has continued unabated across the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip since a December “calm” broke out between the two sides. The lull in fighting began on Dec.

26, leading up to Christmas, amid intense US-led diplomacy aimed at reviving peace efforts. The truce came as the Israeli army announced that a total of 162 Palestinians had been killed in the West Bank and Gaza Strip since the start of the new year.
