Movies. Comments from friends and mine. It's not like I write on the internet as it is, I write as I think it is. And then you decide for yourself. Everyone watches movies very differently. If for someone it's just a waste of time, for me it's the whole world. And I'm not talking about people who don't like me, I'm talking about people who are interesting and interesting to me as a person. Cinema is something very personal for me, I talk about my feelings, my thoughts.

Cinema is a certain method of knowledge. When one is in the real world, one cannot dig that deep. In cinema, you can and should. When we talk about cinema, we cannot talk about quality or poor quality cinema. We can only talk about auteur and mass cinema. If one wants to know the world, one looks at the stars, or at the waves. If a person wants to know himself, he goes to a psychologist. If a man wants to know the world, he goes to the movies. And in the movies a man learns the world, and even more, he learns himself. So when we talk about auteur cinema, we are talking about a world where everyone can know himself. We are talking about a world where everyone can be themselves. And unlike other forms of art, auteur cinema helps people do that. To give you an example - not so long ago I saw the film "Reaching for Heaven", which was released in 1997. And I can happily say that it still has not lost its relevance. In this movie, there are two men who are about to die. And they want their last days to be in a place where they feel perfectly happy - the sea. One is a former teacher who is fed up with his not-so-successful career and decides to quit everything and start his life all over again. The other is a young, ambitious politician who is tired of being constantly in the shadow of his more experienced and more powerful teacher. So together they decide to go to the sea. But just where exactly, they do not know. And that is why they have to go on a trip together. They meet a couple that they think fits them in every way. And although this couple has already gone through a breakup, it clearly will not prevent them from getting back together. And this couple has a child. He's the one they'll have to take with them. Yes, it will be difficult with him, but that's not the worst part of their adventure. And then there is the woman who has been married. She is sure that she will only be happy if her children get to know her former man. In fact, she's already going to get him back as it is. And she's looking forward to meeting him, too. She thinks it won't be difficult.
