I will update the post if I get something new to say. To the people that are complaining about the title and format: I think it has to do with how I downloaded the file. I used a download manager to download it. I did not want to upload it and have it locked up by the protection. Many alternative theory. Today's computer. It took weeks to install it and I'm not being paid to do it. I'm generally not very good with computers. Can they hack it or force the computer to reprogram a key or something? If I put the password on a different computer is that more secure? Is there something easy I can do to lock down the ip and mac address? I would like to fully understand the security behind it before I do something. I would like to know if I should just reinstall windows 10 instead. Please respond if you have any information or guidance. Thanks guys! all This is about an installer for the Matlab software, not a virus. Virus protection is for the email client itself, and they are a separate application from the virus checking application. What is with your constant accusing of the software companies? The fact is, they try to sell their software as a game, but it is not. They want people to use it like a computer, not like a video game. For example, most people do not spend their entire day copying and pasting (only people who can do that are interested in playing a game) or typing in data from external devices (only people who can do that are interested in playing a game). If you are that annoying, perhaps you should try MInew instead. The first crack, here: The only problem is that they do not have the paid version. However, you can use the free
